

DUNGEONS & DRAGONS®

FANTASY ADVENTURE GAME

Player Character Record Sheets

Do you have trouble keeping track of your dwarf's hit points? Are you constantly checking to see what your thief's abilities are? Did your magic-user miss going up a level because you lost the piece of paper with all of his treasure on it? Well cast your gaze upon this item. At last, all of that valuable information has been put on one sheet of paper.

These convenient record sheets display all of the most frequently used information that a player looks for when adventuring with a character. Everything you want to keep track of can be kept on these sheets. Ability scores, armor class, hit points, weapons, spells, treasure, equipment, magical items, saving throws, special abilities and even a combat table are placed at your fingertips. TSR is always looking for more ways to increase your adventuring enjoyment. Be sure to check our other playing aids from TSR, the Game Wizards.

In playing the DUNGEONS & DRAGONS® game, you may find it advantageous — if not essential — to keep tabs on a myriad of information. If not done properly it may become a confusing, time-consuming chore. Dungeon exploring can be made easier and simpler when your character's vital information is neatly arranged. These player character record sheets are designed to make that important information easily accessible so that it may be located at a glance.

Some of your character's statistics, such as name and alignment, are unlikely to change and may be written in with ink. Most of the remaining information may often change during the course of adventuring and should be written in with pencil.

Player's Name. This is your own name and not the name of your character.

Dungeon Master. This is the name of your DM when your character was created.

Character's Name. You may give your character any name you wish.

Alignment. This identifies your character as lawful, neutral or chaotic.

Class. Your character is a fighter, magic-user, thief, cleric, dwarf, elf, or halfling.

Level. This is the experience level of your character.

Armor Class. This number indicates how easy or difficult it is for your character to be hit by a foe.

Hit Points. This number indicates the amount of damage a character can take.

Character Sketch. This space is provided to sketch in the appearance of what the player believes his or her character should be. There are many things that might be done instead of a sketch. You may look for an illustration in a magazine and clip it out and paste it in, or this space may be used to display a personalized symbol or shield.

Ability Scores. The six squares along the left edge of the sheet are where you will list the number rolled for each ability. The space immediately to the right of each ability is for adjustments to that ability. For example, a high strength score may give a +2 bonus to hit and to damage. On the other hand, a low dexterity score may give your character a -1 penalty on armor class.

Saving Throws. The five circles on the right side of the sheet are where the saving throws for each type of special attack are written.

Special Abilities. These are the racial abilities that a non-human character (elf, dwarf, or halfling) is born with. Some of these abilities are various "to hit" bonuses, infravision, and detection of shifting walls, sloping floors, new construction and traps.

Special Skills. This section is provided to list any skills a character might have, such as thieving abilities, magical or clerical spells, or a chart for turning undead (if applicable).

"To Hit" Roll Needed. This chart lists the die roll needed for your character "to hit" each armor class of opponents.

Equipment Carried. Anytime your character acquires a normal or magic item, care should be taken to list the item and to note where or how it is carried. Magic items should be listed with all of their abilities and any charges remaining in the magic item, if known by the player. Special attention should be paid to food and drink as these items are used up on a daily basis.

One method of keeping track of expendable items (such as arrows or torches) is to make a mark for each item and then cross it off as it is used up. For example, if your character has 20 arrows, draw 20 lines in the box or on a separate piece of paper and then draw a line through each one as it is used.

Other Notes. This is a section where you may wish to keep notes on the highlights of a character's adventures. Such things as places explored, people met and monsters encountered are some of the items that might be mentioned.

Money and Treasure. You will certainly want to keep track of the amount of treasure your character has obtained. Be sure to use pencil when filling in this part, as it is sure to change.

Experience. This is the area where a character's experience points are noted, and added to when acquired.

Needed For Next Level. If you keep a record of how many experience points are needed, you have a definite goal while adventuring.
